The Study of Law In The Nation's Capital

With traditions deeply rooted in the past, the Law is among the most venerable of the learned professions. It is the foundation of our modern free society with its emphasis on the value of the individual. Our democracy and our freedom owe their vigor to the continuity of government by Law.

As the Law plays a vital role in our society, so the successful study of Law plays a vital role in preparing the individual to take a significant place in private practice, government service, business, or education. The study of the Law is an exacting discipline, but the goals to be achieved are correspondingly rewarding.

Washington, the capital of the nation, offers the law student an unparalleled opportunity to observe the development of the Law. Here is the greatest legal laboratory in the world, affording first hand glimpses of the processes of the Law, from the determination of the smallest claim to the epoch-making decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States. Here are housed the great administrative agencies of the federal government whose activities affect the daily lives of every citizen. Here is the Congress where all federal laws are made, and the Department of Justice, charged with the enforcement of those laws. Here, too, are the Library of Congress and the specialized libraries of government departments containing the greatest collection of legal research materials in the world. Here, in short, is an unequalled repository of Law.

Students at the Washington College of Law enjoy the unique opportunity for direct observation of the development and operation of the Law at all levels. Here is a matchless opportunity to prepare to represent future clients at the very center of the nation's legal life.

Graduates of the Washington College of Law have made a distinguished record in this respected and influential profession as practitioners, jurists, government attorneys, educators, executives, and legislators, and in private enterprise.

The John Sherman Myers Law Building on The American University Campus was dedicated by the Chief Justice of the United States in September, 1964, completely modern in every respect and designed specifically for the study of Law.

History of The Law School

The Washington College of Law was founded on February 1, 1896, and incorporated in the District of Columbia in 1898. Co-educational from the start, it was among the first Law Schools to offer women an equal opportunity for the study of Law. Its graduates, men and women from every state, have contributed everywhere to the well-being of America for more than three generations.

From its inception, the Washington College of Law has stressed the advantages of instruction in Law in classes taught by faculty members who are not only sound scholars and masterful teachers, but who have had substantial experience in the practice of the Law. The Law School has maintained ideals and policies designed to prepare its graduates to become not only competent practitioners of the Law, both public and private, but valuable citizens of their communities.

The Washington College of Law became a professional division of The American University in 1949. Today it is an integral part of that vigorous and growing institution of higher learning and provides both full-time and part-time programs of study leading to the degree of Juris Doctor.

The Washington College of Law is fully accredited. It is a member of the Association of American Law Schools and approved by the American Bar Association. In addition, the Law School meets the requirements for preparation for the bar in all states and carries the certification of the United States District Court for the District of Columbia as well as the New York State Department of Education.

Facilities

The Washington College of Law occupies the John Sherman Myers Law Building on The American University Campus, at Massachusetts and Nebraska Avenues, Northwest. The building contains the administrative offices of the Law School, classrooms, the Law Library, and all other Law School facilities and activities. It is fully air conditioned.

The Library of the Washington College of Law is administered by the Law Librarian and staff under the supervision of the Dean and Faculty of the Law School. It contains approximately 54,000 volumes, including all United States statutes; the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States and the lower federal courts; numerous state reports; the National Reporter System; the standard English reports; the Codes of the District of Columbia and of the neighboring and more populous states; the leading encyclopedias, digests, compendia citators, reference books and services, annotated reports and more than one hundred law reviews. It is, of course, fully catalogued.

In addition to the Law Library, students enrolled in the Washington College of Law have access to the University libraries and have available the resources and library facilities of the Nation's Capital, including the Library of Congress and its impressive collection of legal authorities.

Objectives of Instruction

The programs of the Washington College of Law are designed to provide a thorough legal education and thus to prepare students for the practice of Law in any of the states, and to provide them with the professional foundations for a legal career. The Law School seeks to develop in each student a consciousness of the responsibility of the lawyer to society for the improvement of the Law and human welfare, whether in public or private pursuits. The Law School proceeds on the assumption that character and social consciousness are indispensable qualifications of a good lawyer.

Methods of Instruction

To accomplish these objectives, the curriculum and the related student activities are designed to combine knowledge of legal principles with the ability to apply them. The Law Faculty presents courses in a manner planned to develop in the student:

- (1) an understanding of the underlying principles of Law;
- (2) the power of analysis to the end that he may exercise sound judgment and discrimination in the practical application of those principles;
- (3) an awareness of the relationship between jurisprudence and the social organization;
- (4) the use of legal research tools and techniques;
- (5) a sharpened and creative imagination so that legal principles may be adapted to new and ever-changing situations.

The Law School employs the "case method" of instruction as it has been developed in modern materials, supplemented by seminars, independent research projects, and moot court work at both trial and appellate level. In addition, the Law School stresses clinical study methods for all phases of judicial and administrative proceedings. Each course provides abundant opportunity for each student to exercise his own reasoning power in solving legal problems. Every student enjoys maximum opportunity to participate in classroom discussions and to develop close personal relations with the Law Faculty.

Admission Requirements

Undergraduate Degree: Applicants for admission must have received a four-year baccalaureate degree granted by an approved college or university.

Law School Admission Test: Each applicant must take the Law School Admission Test well in advance of his expected entry into the Law School. The test is administered by the Educational Testing Service, Box 944, Princeton, New Jersey 08540, in cooperation with leading law schools throughout the country and is given four times a year at various locations throughout the United States and in a number of foreign countries. Arrangements to take the test must be made directly with the Educational Testing Service.

General Information: Beginning students may enter the Washington College of Law only in the Fall Semester. Students with advanced standing or those who are taking courses for transfer credit to other law schools may enter in the Fall or the Spring Semesters and in the Summer Session.

Each applicant must indicate whether he intends to study Law on a full-time or part-time basis. (A student who is enrolled for twelve or more hours a semester is a full-time student.)

An applicant is admitted to either the full-time or part-time program and must register and continue in the program to which he was admitted. He may transfer from one program to the other only with express permission.

It is the responsibility of each student to determine the qualifications for taking the bar examination in a given state, including the sufficiency of his undergraduate college work, and to take the necessary steps to qualify for a particular bar examination. Some states, for example, require that an applicant register with the bar examiners prior to entering law school.

Each application and its supporting data will be evaluated to determine whether the applicant appears reasonably capable of pursuing successfully the study of Law. The Law School may require submission of additional data and information, or may take any other action it deems helpful in determining an applicant's qualifications for the successful study of the Law.

Due to the large number of applicants and the fact that they come from most States and several foreign countries, a personal interview with each applicant is not feasible. Any applicant who desires to visit the Law School, however, will be welcome. The Director of Admissions will be glad to confer personally with any applicant and to answer any inquiries he may have regarding admission.

To allow adequate opportunity for the necessary evaluation, applications and supporting data must be submitted as early as possible and if received after May 1 have little chance of being considered for the Fall Semester. Additional application forms to the one in the center-fold of this Catalog are available upon request to the Law School.

In order to be considered for admission, each applicant must submit to the Director of Admissions, Washington College of Law, The American University, Washington, D. C. 20016, the following:

- (1) A formal application for admission to the Law School accompanied by the required non-refundable application fee of $15.00.
- (2) An official transcript from each college or university attended (including professional schools) showing in detail the academic record of the applicant. (Transcripts will be accepted from no source other than the issuing institution and, when received, become the property of the Law School and a permanent part of the applicant's file.)
- (3) An official copy of the Law School Admission Test score(s).

Accepted beginning students are required, at the time of acceptance, to make a non-refundable deposit, currently $100, to be applied against tuition if they register and to be forfeited if they do not. If the deposit is not made as required, the acceptance is cancelled.

Any applicant who has attended another law school will be considered only if the applicant is in good standing at that law school and unconditionally eligible to return. There are no exceptions.

Advanced Standing: An applicant who has received his baccalaureate degree and has pursued a portion of his legal education in an approved law school may apply for advanced standing at the Washington College of Law provided that he is in good standing at the law school attended and unconditionally eligible to return to that law school. The applicant must submit an official transcript of such prior law school attendance as well as from all other colleges and universities attended. He must also submit all other data required for admission as indicated above. To be eligible for a degree, the applicant with transfer credits from another law school must complete a minimum of twenty-eight semester hours at the Washington College of Law with a "C" or better grade average.

Advanced standing is granted on a provisional basis. A student will be given full standing and credit for his prior work at another approved law school provided he completes his first year of full-time study (or the equivalent in part-time study) at the Washington College of Law with a grade average of "C" or better.

An advanced standing applicant may be admitted for the Fall, Spring or Summer provided an appropriate program of study is available.

Unclassified Students: Degree candidates from other approved law schools may be admitted for the Fall, Spring or Summer as unclassified students to earn credits for transfer to the applicant's law school. The applicant must be in good standing at his own law school and must secure the written approval of his dean.

Admission requirements include:

- (1) A formal application for admission accompanied by the required non-refundable application fee.
- (2) A letter from the dean of the applicant's law school to which the credits will be transferred stating:
 - a. the applicant is in good academic standing,
 - b. the specific courses approved for the applicant's study, and
 - c. the applicant will receive transfer credit for all courses in which he receives an acceptable grade

Unclassified students are not required to submit transcripts, or Law School Admission Test scores.

Auditors: Members of the bar, graduates from approved law schools, and other qualified individuals may be admitted at the discretion of the Dean to enroll as auditors. Normally, an auditor is expected to prepare all assignments and to participate in classroom discussion, but he takes no examinations and receives no academic credit.

The Summer Session

A Summer Session is offered each year which begins in early June and continues for a period of nine weeks. The summer session classes generally are held only in the evenings.

In order to assure the student as wide a selection of elective courses as possible over a series of summer sessions, the summer curriculum is carefully selected by the Law Faculty with regard to the required and elective courses offered during the regular semesters.

Full-time students may take up to seven credit hours in a summer session.

Part-time students are required to attend each of the summer sessions following the first, second, and third academic years of attendance and, in each such summer, to undertake the work prescribed in the part-time program.

Attendance at summer sessions makes it possible for full-time students to complete their studies in two and one-half calendar years rather than three. Intelligent planning is essential to gain proper advantage from summer study, and students are urged to seek advice and counsel in regard to their summer programs. It is not possible for part-time students to accelerate as their program of part-time study requires four academic years plus three summer sessions to complete—the equivalent of nearly four calendar years.

Summer sessions are open to new students with advanced standing and to students in good standing at other accredited law schools for transfer credit. Beginning students are not admitted in the Summer Session.

Degree Requirements

The Washington College of Law offers full-time and part-time programs leading to the degree of Juris Doctor. The degree will be conferred upon all students who satisfactorily complete not less than eighty semester hours, including all courses as may be required, with a quality point index of 1.0 or better, and who have been in attendance for at least six residence semesters of study as defined below, and who are recommended for the degree by the Law Faculty.

Degree requirements are normally met in six semesters (three academic years) of full-time study or eight semesters (four academic years) plus three summer sessions of part-time study.

Full-time students are expected to devote substantially all of their time to law study and are required to carry not less than twelve, nor more than fourteen semester hours, except by special permission. A full-time student may not engage in outside employment for more than twenty hours per week.

Part-time students are normally expected to register for eight semester hours. Students who are employed for more than twenty hours per week must enroll as part-time students.

Degree requirements make it mandatory that the last two residence semesters, as defined below, which require a minimum of twenty-four semester hours, must be taken at the Washington College of Law.

A semester is defined as a period of instruction of fifteen weeks duration. A semester hour is defined as one hour of classwork per week for one semester. A residence semester is defined as one during which a student successfully completes twelve or more semester hours. A student enrolled in a schedule of less than twelve semester hours receives residence credit in the ratio that the hours, successfully completed, bear to twelve, provided that no more than six semester hours of residence credit may be earned in one summer session and no more than twelve semester hours of residence credit may be earned in one semester. A student who has taken substantially all of his law study at the Washington College of Law, and who has otherwise met graduation requirements, is deemed to have met all residence requirements.

A student enrolled in the Washington College of Law will be given no credit for work thereafter completed in any other educational institution or in any other division of The American university, nor may he engage in any such work, unless specific written permission has been obtained in advance. Permission will be granted only in exceptional cases.

Ordinarily, day classes meet between 9 a.m. and 3 p.m. Evening classes generally meet from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m., Monday through Friday; however, the majority of the evening classes meet from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m., and part-time students will ordinarily attend classes only four evenings a week. Saturday classes, conducted primarily for elective course credit, ordinarily meet between the hours of 9:00 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. Summer Session classes ordinarily meet between the hours of 6:00 p.m. and 9:00 p.m.

Financial Information

Tuition. The following tuition charges are applicable for the academic year 1968-69. Changes, if any, in tuition costs and fees for the academic year 1969-70 should be announced by July 1, 1969. Tuition for full-time students (12 to 14 credit hours) is $840 a semester; tuition for part-time students in the Fall and Spring semesters, and for all students in the Summer Session, is $60 per credit hour. A $100 non-refundable deposit against tuition, described above under "Admission Requirements," is required of all beginning students shortly after acceptance.

Additional Fees. Non-refundable fees paid by all students are as follows:

Application fee (paid once only on submission of application)	$15.00
General fee (each semester)	10.00
General fee (Summer Session)	3.00
Late registration fee	10.00
Late payment of financial obligations	10.00
Deferred or special examinations	5.00
Returned check fee (for personal checks not honored by bank) each	3.00
Health fee (optional for part-time students) each semester	20.00
Official transcripts (after first, each)	1.00

Each student receives The American University Law Review, membership in the Student Bar Association, and use of a locker, all without further cost.

Deferred Payments. Students who are registered for three or more credit hours of course work and whose total charges, after deducting any form of tuition assistance, exceed $180 may elect to use the Deferred Payment Plan. Under this arrangement the student pays approximately one third of the tuition and fees at registration and the balance in two equal payments on November 1 and December 1.

The charge for this deferred payment plan is $12 if the amount deferred is $650 or more and $6 if the amount deferred is less than $650.

A student who elects to use the Deferred Payment Plan is responsible for making his payments in full at the Office of Student Accounts on or before the due dates. A student who does not make his payments on time will be assessed a $10 fee for each late payment. Repeated failures to make payments when they are due will result in denial of future deferred payment privileges and may result in severance of the student's relationship with the University.

Refunds. Prorated refunds of tuition will be allowed only after the execution of withdrawal forms provided for the purpose by the Law School Registrar. The amounts to be cancelled will be calculated as of the date the forms are received and signed by the Office of Student Accounts. A student permitted or requested to withdraw from classes during the Fall and Spring Semesters is entitled to a cancellation of charges for tuition in accordance with the schedule below. In this refund schedule, the first week of a semester is defined as beginning on the official opening date of the semester, not the date the student may have his first class.

Withdrawal during the second week of semester	80%
Withdrawal during the third and fourth weeks of semester	60%
Withdrawal during the fifth week of semester	40%
Withdrawal during the sixth week of semester	20%
Withdrawal after the sixth week of semester	None

Complete withdrawal from the University during the first week of classes will result in full cancellation of tuition less $5, and, for beginning students who withdraw during the first week of attendance, less the amount of the non-refundable deposit against tuition described above.

Special fees are not refundable.

Students who discontinue class attendance but who do not officially withdraw during the cancellation period will be responsible for payment of the full amount of the applicable tuition and fees.

A refund of 60% tuition will be made in the Summer Session if the forms are presented to the Office of Student Accounts by the end of the second week of classes. No other refunds will be made during the Summer Session.

Charges Subject to Change. Charges listed are subject to change at the beginning of any session.

Veterans' Benefits—Veterans eligible to receive educational benefits under Public Law 89-358 (Veterans' Readjustment Benefits Act of 1966), or the previously existing Public Laws, PL 634 (War Orphans), PL 88-361 (Children of Disabled Veterans), and PL 87-815 (Disabled Veterans) must submit application to the Veterans Administration prior to enrollment to insure full benefits.

Certificate of Eligibility from the V.A. must be presented to the Veterans' Counselor located during registration in the financial section. If Certificate is not available at that time, it must be presented as soon as received to the Veterans' Counselor, Leonard Center, Room 103.

Notification by the V.A. of approval of the application must be presented to the Veterans' Counselor during registration.

Payments by Veterans. Veteran students enrolled in accordance with public laws providing educational benefits are subject to all rules and regulations of the University and they must pay any charges incurred that are not paid by the Veterans Administration.

Interpretative regulations regarding the responsibilities of the veteran and the University are available by contacting the Veterans' Counselor in the Office of Student Accounts.

Academic Standards

The quality of each student's work is measured and graded as follows:

- A—Exceptional performance
- B or B+—Superior performance
- C or C+—Competent performance
- D—Marginal performance*
- F—Failure

Applicable in satisfaction of hourly requirements for the degree and for residence.*

A failing grade in a required course means that the student must retake the course at the next available offering.*

There is assigned to each letter grade a numerical qualitative value for each credit hour as follows:

A-3; B+-2.5; B-2; C+-1.5; C-1; D-.5; F-0.

A student's academic achievement is measured by dividing the number of quality points earned by the number of credit hours of work undertaken.

A minimum of eighty credit hours with a cumulative quality point index of 1.0 is required for graduation. A student who fails to achieve and maintain a quality point index of 1.0 will be placed on probation and may be dismissed for scholastic deficiency.

The Law Faculty may dismiss a student who in its opinion is unqualified to pursue the study of Law regardless of his academic standing.

A student who has been dismissed for scholastic deficiency may, within ten days thereafter, file a written petition for reinstatement. The Law Faculty may reinstate such a student upon such terms and conditions as it sees fit. It is the policy of the Law Faculty not to reinstate any student dismissed for scholastic deficiency unless the student is able to furnish convincing proof that his failure was not due to lack of capacity to study Law but was the result of other causes which have been removed.

Examinations

Written examinations are held at the end of most courses. Final grades are based primarily on the written examinations, but in determining a grade the instructor may give such weight as he deems advisable to daily recitations and other assignments, including term papers.

Failure to take the regularly scheduled examination can result in a failing grade. If good and sufficient reason is demonstrated, permission may be granted to take a special examination and a date for such will be set by the Registrar. Such examinations require payment of a special fee.

A student unable to take an examination as scheduled must notify the Registrar immediately.

In the areas in which final examinations are not given, such as Research Seminars, Legal Writing Projects, Appellate Advocacy, Trial Practice Court, Lawcor, and the like, substantial amounts of research, writing and other demonstrations of intellectual capacity are required. In each such activity, the final grades are based on the instructor's appraisal of the quality of each student's total performance.

Attendance

Regular and punctual attendance is expected in all classes. The Law Faculty is convinced that preparation of all assigned material and attendance at all classes are essential to sound academic results. Unless all work thus lost is conscientiously and effectively made up, unsatisfactory results can be expected.

Student Life and Activities

The American University Law Review. The American University Law Review is edited and published by the students of the Washington College of Law advised by a member of the Law Faculty. It consists of leading articles on legal topics, book reviews, comments on legislation and on recent court decisions of the State and Federal Courts, much of which is written by students. An invitation to join the Staff of the Law Review is a tribute to scholarship, and hence is one of the highest honors a student at the Washington College of Law can attain.

Each student receives a subscription to the Law Review the cost of which is taken from the General Fee.

Student Bar Association. The Student Bar Association of the Washington College of Law is a member of the Law Student Division of the American Bar Association. All students are members of the Student Bar Association and entitled to vote in the annual election of its officers and delegates. A Law Faculty member serves as Advisor. The Association sponsors many co-curricular and extracurricular activities designed to foster the moral, intellectual, and social development of the future lawyer and to provide an introduction to the type of activity carried on by local, state and national bar associations.

Each student may apply to become a member of the Law Student Division of the American Bar Association.

The Innuendo. The Student Bar Association publishes a periodical for students and Alumni containing articles and information of contemporary interest to the legal profession, the student body and the Alumni.

The Law Wives Club. The Washington College of Law endorses membership in the Law Wives Club. All wives of law students are eligible for membership. The club sponsors and supports many of the Law School's co-curricular activities.

Orientation Program. In conjunction with the Student Bar Association, the Washington College of Law conducts an Orientation Program for beginning students at the start of the academic year. This program is designed to acquaint students with basic information regarding the legal profession, the study of Law, and the Law School.

A Student Handbook, prepared by the Student Bar Association and the Washington College of Law, is issued to each beginning law student. It contains full information about the Student Bar Association, The American University Law Review, the professional fraternities, student life, the Placement Program, the Law School and campus facilities, and the rules of conduct for law students.

The Orientation Program for new students is held during registration week for the Fall Semester. Beginning students are required to report in accordance with instructions given them after they are admitted. A student's failure to report in accordance with these instructions may prevent his timely registration.

The Edwin A. Mooers Lectures. This is an annual lecture series founded in honor of Dr. Edwin A. Mooers, Sr., a member of the Law Faculty since 1918. Inaugurated in 1961 by the late Roscoe Pound, Dean Emeritus of Harvard Law School, these lectures are given each spring by a prominent scholar on a topic of contemporary interest. All law students are invited to attend.

Moot Court. At the Washington College of Law both Appellate Advocacy and Trial Practice Court are included in the curriculum. The system of moot court programs is designed to give students actual experience in legal research, in the preparation of briefs and in oral argument, as well as the experience of trying a case in practice court sessions.

Oral Argument Competition. The Student Bar Association sponsors an Oral Argument Competition each year to enhance the opportunity of students to gain experience in advocacy and research. While participation in the Oral Argument Program is voluntary, all students are strongly encouraged to join. Appropriate trophies are awarded.

National Inter-Law School Moot Court Competition. Each year the Association of the Bar of the City of New York sponsors a moot court competition in which all the approved law schools of the country are invited to participate. A division of this competition is held in the District of Columbia among the teams of each of the law schools in the Nation's Capital, and the District winner participates in the final rounds in New York City. The Washington College of Law participates annually in this National Inter-Law School Competition. The team for this competition is selected on the basis of performance, scholastic standing and general fitness for the honor. To be selected is regarded as a distinct scholastic achievement.

Jessup International Law Competition. The Association of International Law Societies and The American Society of International Law sponsors an annual moot court competition in the field of international law among the laws schools in the United States. The Washington College of Law participates in this competition.

Legal Aid Services. Under the auspices of the Student Bar Association qualified students are assigned to local courts, the District of Columbia Junior Bar Section, the Neighborhood Legal Services Program, and the Legal Aid Agency to assist attorneys in the representation of indigents. In some instances upper classmen may appear in the courts to argue matters before certain courts under the supervision of attorneys and within the discretion of the courts. This program at The Washington College of Law was recognized by The American Bar Association Law Student Division as the "most outstanding Student Bar project in the United States."

Professional Fraternities. Six professional fraternities have established chapters at the Washington College of Law:

Phi Delta Delta (Beta Chapter established April 17, 1913). International Fraternity for women founded at the Law School of the University of Southern California in 1911.

The women's dormitories on the campus are generally not available to women law students and there are no campus accommodations for married couples. Additional housing information will be furnished to admitted students.

The University Residence Hall Service does maintain listings of housing accommodations in the vicinity of the campus. These listings are not published for mailing. Students who wish to avail themselves of this counseling service may personally visit the University Residence Hall Office to examine the current listings and secure available information concerning locations, rentals, etc. Off-campus housing in Washington and the nearby suburban communities is readily available.

The University maintains a cafeteria with a Snack Bar. In addition, several off-campus food service facilities are located nearby.

University Health Service. During the Fall and Spring Semesters the University Infirmary provides ordinary diagnostic and medical care for most minor illnesses for full-time students. More complex problems are referred to Sibley Memorial Hospital, located near the Campus. Those requiring in-patient care will be treated at Sibley, with charges by the Hospital and physician borne by the patient. A group plan of Student Health Insurance is available to full-time law students to cover costs for more extensive care and treatment.

All full-time students must submit a medical history form prior to their initial registration in the Law School.

Student Insurance Plan. A Student Accident and Sickness Insurance Plan is available for the full-time student. More detailed information about this plan may be obtained from the University Office of Student Personnel Health Service or from the Washington College of Law Admissions Office.

All full-time law students are urged to avail themselves of this protection.

Programs of Study

Programs of study leading to the degree of Juris Doctor are established for both full-time and part-time students.

The programs have been designed by the Law Faculty to provide carefully selected required and elective courses. The content and sequence of these courses are arranged to accomplish the educational objectives of the Law School and to provide the student with basic abilities and professional knowledge.

Since the Law must change and expand with the needs of the local and national community, a proper program of legal study must be flexible and adaptable to changing conditions. The Law Faculty is engaged continuously in a study of its programs. Changes, some small and others of basic significance, are constantly under consideration and are implemented from time to time as sound judgment dictates.

While it is possible, therefore, to set forth programs of study as they exist at any given time, the required courses, the electives, the course content, and the credit hours are subject to change as the Law Faculty may determine.

As the term implies, a "required" course is one which must be taken by each student, and taken during the semester indicated. Only under most compelling circumstances will consideration be given to varying the requirements. Full-time students who attend summer sessions will depart of necessity from the normal programs, and they should make careful inquiry, in advance, of the effect attendance at the summer sessions will have on their individual programs. Attendance at summer sessions is required of part-time students for the first three years of attendance.

Programs of full-time and part-time study are set forth on pages 25 and 26.

Prior to the opening of each regular semester and each summer session, the Washington College of Law announces the courses it will offer in both the elective and required fields. Copies of these announcements are available on request to the Registrar.

While it is not possible for a student to specialize in his law study for the Juris Doctor degree, some concentration in selected areas is possible and may be desirable.

Insofar as it is administratively possible, electives will be offered so as to enable the student to have the widest opportunity for taking courses, both required and elective, in broad areas of concentration.

In giving consideration to an area of concentration, the student should consider that a lawyer should be a broadly educated person. The selection of courses from more than one area of concentration may be advisable rather than an attempt to take courses exclusively in one area.

It is suggested that each student become familiar with the subjects covered in any bar examination he may contemplate taking, as this knowledge may aid materially in planning his program, particularly in the matter of electives and area concentration.

Students who anticipate taking the New York State bar examination must take six hours of course work in each summer session in order to qualify for that examination.

The Deans and members of the Law Faculty are available for counseling and advice in connection with the individual's program of law study.

Research Seminars. Several seminars are offered each year. They are designed to investigate various contemporary legal problems through group discussion, individual research, and writing. All seminars carry two hours credit. A course number is assigned to each seminar. Enrollment requires the approval of the Dean and the instructor.

Seminars offered recently covered such areas as: interdisciplinary view of the administration of criminal justice, land use and planning, contemporary constitutional law problems, contemporary tort problems, international law, law-science policy, federal transportation regulation, law and poverty, law and psychiatry, natural resource law, and the legislative process.

Elective courses may be added from time to time at the discretion of the faculty. Such additions will be announced in the course offering published for each semester and summer session. Certain electives will be offered more frequently than others.
